

Brigid Marlin

Mary O'Hara and Brigid Marlin were in the same class at Sion Hill School in Dublin. Later, in the early 50s, they attended the National College of Art in Dublin together. They have kept in touch ever since.

Brigid later studied art in Paris, Montreal, New York and Vienna. She has taught art in Austria with Ernst Fuchs.

Her book, From East to West was published by Collins in 1989

Brigid lives in England but travels extensively. In 1961 she founded the Inscape Group, later renamed 'The Society for Art of the Imagination'. She has exhibited all over the world. She has done paintings of the late Queen Mother and of J. G. Ballard. Her portraits hang in the National Gallery.
