

At the end of Mary O'Hara's excellent presentation, I was moved to speak to the audience. I said to them that we had been privileged to hear one of the greatest artists of our age. One of her remarkable gifts has been in the fusion of words and music, impeccably performed and with a touching purity and spirituality. The account of her journeys through life were re-told with a great sense of humour, joy and sensitivity. The audience was spellbound.

Professor David Watkins about Mary O'Hara's presentation at World Harp Congress, Dublin, 2005

Reminiscing

By the shores of Glendalough in County Wicklow, Ireland, Mary O'Hara contemplates with gratitude the varied events that made her life so fulfilling.

While she no longer sings or plays the harp in public, she illustrates her presentation with videos of her recordings and TV appearances.

www.maryohara.co.uk Email: information@maryohara.co.uk